From the Ink Pot...

March is a time of heat,
As summer's sun bears
down on every street,

And parched earth cries out
for cooling rain,
To quench its thirst and soothe its burning pain.

But even in this season of dryness, Life still flourishes, with a fierce brightness.

The harvest season
is at its height,
As fields of maize and wheat
are brought to light,

So let us celebrate this month,
With hearts full of hope and joy
that cannot hide!

For March
is a time of glory,
A season of growth,
renewal, and victory.

Job Shadow!

I had the opportunity to shadow a software developer at Intershu, and witness their process firsthand. I was amazed at how they could take a complex problem and break it down into manageable steps. I learned that software development is not just about writing code but also about problem-solving, collaboration and creativity.

The highlight of the day was watching the developer use agile development methodologies to work on a project in sprints. It was fascinating to see how they worked collaboratively with their team to deliver a high-quality product. I was impressed by how the developer utilized various tools, such as integrated development environments. Overall, shadowing a software developer was an incredible learning experience and an amazing opportunity to learn about the field I would like to go into one day.

Hayden chose to do her job shadowing at Lory Park Zoo.

I shadowed a lady named Robynn. I started the day by cleaning the bunny cages and feeding them. After that, I had to clean the cockatoo cages where I met Sammy, the Umbrella Cockatoo. At first, Sammy nibbled my shoe, which I thought was cute, but then he bit my ankle, and I didn't think it was so cute anymore. After I cleaned his cage, I went to the tortoises to feed them and to make sure that all of them were there.

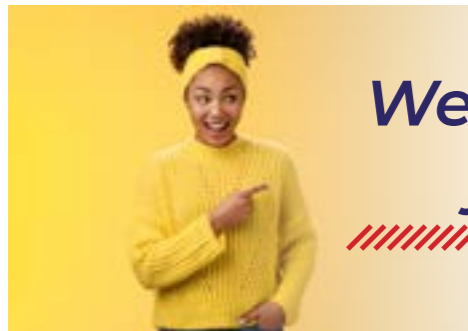

I also had to clean the Iguana cage, and after that, I met Petunia, a very friendly, large female snake. I got the opportunity to re-decorate the cages of the smaller snakes, which was a lot of fun. I also got to work with Ball Pythons and Corn Snakes. I had to help a Rock Monitor to shed its skin as she was struggling.

I had so much fun working with the animals, although it was hard work looking after them, from cleaning their cages to feeding them, as well as writing reports, but I can honestly say that I can see myself working in this field. There is still so much to learn from them.

Fun fact that I learned: Tortoises can feel things through their shells.

We want your creative juices flowing!

As we continue to build a strong sense of community at our school, we are looking for your help in creating a new character to represent us in our school newspaper. This character should embody the values and ethos of our school, and should be something that students, staff, and parents alike can relate to and be proud of.

We encourage all members of our community to get involved in this project. We want to hear your ideas and see your creativity as we work together to develop a character that truly represents who we are.

Think about what makes our school unique. What values do we hold dear? What are some of the traits that define us as a community? Let your imagination run wild, and don't be afraid to think outside the box.

Once we have received all of your ideas and submissions, we will work together as a community to choose the best and most representative character. We are excited to see what you come up with, and we look forward to seeing this character come to life in our school newspaper.

Thank you for your continued support and for helping us build a stronger and more vibrant school community.

Sincerely,
The Editor

Principal Spotted in the Wild, Supporting South Africa in a Cricket Match.

It's not every day that you see your school principal outside of the school setting, let alone in the wild, watching a cricket match. But that's exactly what some lucky fans of the South African cricket team were treated to during the recent 5-day match against West Indies. As the game was in full swing, with tension running high and the sound of cheering filling the air, a few keen-eyed fans spotted our principal, Mr. van Rensburg, amongst the crowd, cheering on the South African team with great enthusiasm. It was heartening to see our principal engaging with the community in such a positive way, and demonstrating his passion not only for education, but also for sports and the development of well-rounded individuals!
